Colter, my mental health, and the blog.

Hey, guys. Sorry for the sudden radio silence. There's a few things I need to go over. This past week has been a literal nightmare for me and my friends. There's a few things I need to go over just to be transparent with you guys.

Here is a mirror for all of the images in this post, for easier viewing.

I'm only talking about Colter, because according to these two asks, Colter does not respect me enough to also not talk about our conversation publicly as well. If I promise not to talk about something publicly, I expect the same. Mutual respect. Especially since, according to the ask, they mentioned it to give the streamer a laugh. This situation isn't funny. I no longer see Colter as a victim.

When we first talked, they were very understanding, kind, and willing to speak with me. They were surprisingly nice to me, despite everything. It was,, nice! I enjoyed talking to them. At first. I'd explained to them why I thought they were a victim, in my own words,

They explained their reasoning, and we continued to speak for a while. Eventually getting into Kardia, and other stuff.

Eventually it got to a point where I had to take my break, and I made this post.

I know Colter sent me a message after we spoke about Kardia, but I was so overwhelmed at the time I had to log out of the blog's discord. I didn't check the discord account during my break or while I logged on the couple times to answer an ask or two or reblog stuff.

I check back on the discord account, see Colter's message, they were asking me if they could explain why Bones shouldn't have to reach out to their victims and why their victims should go to them, and I assured them that they didn't need to ask to explain themself, while also saying that it isn't right for a victim to approach someone they are literally afraid of. My own words, so after this, this is where things are going to get harder to talk about for me. mentally.

i'd misread an ask and brought it up to them, which i apologized for misreading. Colter may have realized that I wasn't stable, or maybe they were confident after the livestream of my blog.

But they were acting like a completely different person. they were very mean, very forceful, and very not understanding. it was like they were trying to back me into a corner.

i'm sorry, but i have to show screenshots just so you guys can see this. I'm very sorry for breaking my promise, Colter, if you're reading this. But I now understand that the entire encounter triggered me and left me unable to think properly.

So, essentially, by saying one thing that I wanted, but was not acting towards, it discredited my blog. They didn't understand that what my personal wants does not reflect my actions. I was not seeking to actually remove Bones from the internet, and I feel like Colter may have known that, too. They perhaps just wanted a reason to challenge me.

And, their last comment, which broke me and forced me to silently unfriend them, "is this conversation going to continue..... so that i am not waiting for days without a word again." they are being severely inconsiderate against the fact that I had taken a literal hiatus from the blog and all things associated with it.

I was very distressed during this entire conversation. I had just woken up, and I needed to get to work. I've been having serious anxiety yesterday and today. This conversation above was enough to make me see that Colter is too far into it. Maybe they were a victim before, but they've been with Bones for a very long time that perhaps they think this type of behavior is okay? I know that, when I had my abuser in my life, I thought that a lot of toxic behavior was okay, and that I was not a good person back then.

I realized today that this conversation was a lot like an experience I went through in the past. I was not able to defend myself, and I fell back into that hole where I couldn't think straight. It was like being sent into six years in the past.

About my mental health, like I said, I've been severely anxious. This past week has been horrible, not just because of Bones or Colter, but because everything we're trying to do and everything I've been working for just has been a nightmare. I don't understand people who brush real abuse aside as "not relevant," while I literally talk to a friend of mine, who I helped realize that Bones had gaslit them. That their trauma was valid. That they still are trying to get over the affects of what Bones did to them to this day.

I want to be strong for you guys. I want you guys to know that I'm capable of doing this.
But that's also a lot of pressure for one person. That's a lot of pressure for someone who has major anxiety and depression.

I also don't want it to come off like I'm trying to guilt trip or suicide bait. There is no way I am actually capable of trying to commit, but I do experience being suicidal, and I do experience self hatred. This isn't healthy, even if I do give myself breaks. This is starting to bleed into my actual life and people around me are starting to notice that I'm not quite alright.

So that brings us to this blog. I'm not deleting the blog, though I did consider it. That would be giving Bones what they wanted, and it would also follow the old trend of Bones blogs being deleted, and everything being lost. That's not what I want.

There's the options of giving the blog to someone else, but I don't want to give it to any random stranger, and I wouldn't wish this pressure on my friends. On people I care for and have supported me and each other.

There's the option of archiving the blog. Keeping it on hiatus, and reviving it until Bones shoots themself in the foot again, which, I'm pretty sure will happen again sometime. The only reason Bones is trying to "show" people that they changed is because of my blog, and because of us. If we weren't shown the fact that Bones had lied about "killing themselves or checking into a mental hospital," in their own words, instead of apologizing, we wouldn't be here. Bones wouldn't have rebranded and be where they are now without the existence of this blog.

So, the choice is that, I'm going to be taking down the link to the archive, reorganizing it and adding more context so it makes sense, and then putting the blog on a hiatus until Bones gets themself into trouble again, whenever that may be.

I really appreciate you guys for sticking around, and I hope that, after I get the new archive up, you'll be around still.
